I was advised by Plastors. I said I had ny benefit, and armyent a wealthy English Jew, landed in this city, by steamer, from England. For the last twenty-sever years he had been engaged in business in West Australis. He first went there from his native country and started a hotel and wholesale store attached. He rapidly accumulated wealth, and eventually established himself as a merchant on an extensive scale. Mrs. Levy took the affidavits and laid them before Mr. Robinson, who very easily induced her to believe them false and malicious.

He next set to work to find out the real authorship of the influences used to break off his match. He fornia he engaged in shipping large amounts of goods to start new enterprises on the El Dorado. Soon gold was discovered in Melbourne, and here too he carried on similar transactions, joining in partner-ship with two other gentlemen. Meanwhile he had Anderson Shooting his Wife and Paramonr at 172 Bast 232 Street. narried a Miss Phillips, a beautiful and estima lady of his own faith, of Launchester, Tasmania. In the year 1856 he left Australia to establish himself in London, thence to ship goods to his branch house in Australia. His whole business career seems t have been one continued run of success, and he ha already amassed an immense fortune. About two years since, being still in London, he further en-larged his business by establishing an agency at No. 4 Courtland street, in this city, for the purpose of shipping tobacco and many other products and com-modities to his branch houses in California, Mel-About eighteen months ago Mr. Robinson had the misfortune to lose his wife. Shortly after her death he started on an extensive tour. He visited successively California, China, thence traveling overland through Europe to England again, whence he came to this country, arriving, as already stated, in this city about six months since. Here he at once es-tablished another agency besides the one at No. 4 Courtlandt street, at No. 24 West Forty-first street. From motives of curiosity, therefore, they questioned Levy; who replied to them where he had first met Mr. Robinson and stated that Mr. Robinson had at one time acted as a gent for his brother-in-law in West Australia. He then made a statement which was destined to cause him much trouble. He said that Robinson had first arrived in Australia, a convict from England, whence he had been transported for picking pockets. He stated the principal events in Mr. Robinson had first arrived in Australia, a convict from England, whence he had been transported for picking pockets. They conveyed it among one another quickly, and it soon reached the ears of the children and relatives of Mrs. Levy, the lady whom he was on the point of marrying. Whether these believed the statements of the man Levy, whether they wished to levy blackmail, or whether they wished at all events to prevent the contemplated match—for it was a known fact that they manifested a strong dislike to Mr. Robinson—does not appear. Their motive is not clearly apparent, though it is strongly surmised that they had an eye to the contents of Mr. Robinson's strong box, and desired an ample compensation for the rich prize which he was to bear from among them. For this purpose he procured an infirm Israelitish clerk in this city, of a somewhat unsettled mind, named Aaron Martin, who made assertions regarding the character of Mr. Robinson, which perfectly coincided with those of Levy. The persons who were so careful of guarding the fair name of Mrs. Levy from dishonor then took the men Levy and Martin before a magistrate, where each of them made affidavit to the statements alleged to be libellous by Mr. Robinson. BACK AGAIN.

The departure of Ruthgarber (known as the "ruthless grabber") for his trip to the fatherland, was duly chronicled in your columns. Buth has returned again, and was welcomed back by the host of friends who wore such iong visages at his departure. The harlots, especially, will rejoice, for the distinguished Jew was always their friend in need, and the man who was invariably appealed to when ball was wanted. Of course he is paid, and paid liberally, for all that he does; but that is of no account so long as he stands ready to acreen them from the law's punishment. It is said that his first act will be to secure a mortgage on Mollie Trussel's property, and then sign her bail bonds ($5,000). No one will regret to see Mollie again at liberty; but it is really a pity that she should be bled as this relentless and heart-less Ruthgarber will bleed her.

ARREST OF AN ALLEGED EXPRESS ROBBER.
An arrest of considerable importance was made here on Thursday last, but the particulars have been studiously kept a secret in the breasts of the police. From what I can learn, the particulars are to the following effect: Some months ago the safe of the American Express Company was thrown from a car on a rairoad terminating in Boston, Mass. There were three parties engaged in this bold robbery, one in the car, the others being stationed at a favorable locality on the route. A signal was agreed upon, and when this was given the safe was hurled from the car, and was precipitated down a steep embankment. The safe, it is stated, contained $27,000 in greenbacks. The absence of the safe was discovered before the train reached the first station. A hand-car was immediately sent out in search of it, and this frightened away the robbers, who gained nothing by this bold exploit. Harry Jennings, the noted dog fancier, was arrested shortly afterwards, but there was not sufficient testimony against him, and he was discharged. James Shaw, alias Colbert, alias Calvert, is believed to be the man who threw the safe from the car. A telegraphic dispatch was received. There is no Wednesday, and on Thursday he was arrested. These are all the facts thus far received. The prisoner was required to give bail in the sum of $30,000, in default of which he is now in jail. The case will be examined on the arrival of officers from Massachusetts.

The evidence will all be made public at no distant day.

A "SPORT" IN TROUBLE.

Guilford H. Hewett, a gambler, was arrested yesterday, on complaint of his "moll," Ids Preston, who claims that he has stolen a gold watch from her, worth $150, and a diamond pin worth $100. Hewett, Ids says, had got "broke," and when he woke up in the morning he took her watch from under the pillow, and her ring from the toilet stand, and "showed them up the spout" for $100. This was lost the same day, in "fighting the tigen," and Ids, seeing no other way to get possession of her valuables, swore out a warrant for larcomy. The sportive youth is now in jail, and will go to State Prison unless Ida sees fit to leave the town when the day arrives when her dishorest pimp is called up for triel.
